Commentary

US equities fell heavily over the quarter. In July the markets took fright at the political deadlock between a Democrat President, reluctant to cut spending, and a Republican-controlled Congress unwilling to raise taxes. A deadline to raise the national debt ceiling was used by ideologues on the political right to force a showdown with the President. The debate raged right up to the last minute, knocking market confidence in the US government's ability to deal with the US debt overhang in a sensible manner. Then in August, a shockingly bad Institute for Supply Management figure and some other poor economic data points triggered fears of another recession.

Meanwhile, the US stock market was not immune to the political and economic uncertainty over the eurozone.

What type of funds are in this risk category?

These are specialist equity funds that focus on set geographical regions or a particular type of share e.g. shares of smaller companies or those that conform to certain criteria.

What is the risk rating?

- › These risk ratings have been developed by Prudential to help provide an indication of a fund's potential level of risk and reward based on the type of assets which may be held by the fund. Other companies may use different descriptions and as such these risk ratings should not be considered as generic across the fund management industry.
- › We regularly review our fund risk ratings, so they may change in the future. If, in our view, there is a material change in the fund's level of risk, for example due to a significant change to the assets held by the fund or in the way the fund is managed, we will provide information on the new risk rating. We recommend that you make sure you understand the risk rating of any fund before you invest. You will find this information at www.pru.co.uk/factsheets
- › You should also consider discussing your decision and the appropriateness of a fund's risk rating with an adviser.
