Commentary

Concerns over the slowing economy and the eurozone sovereign debt crisis meant that corporate bonds were volatile during the quarter. The highest rated bonds held up the best and the fund's conservative positioning therefore helped performance. In particular, the portfolio's underweight in unsecured bank bonds was advantageous. They performed poorly due to investors' fears that banks might have exposure to government debt issued by Greece and other weaker peripheral eurozone economies. The fund manager's preference for asset-backed securities also benefited performance as uncertainty steered investors towards secured assets.

Following a sell-off in credit, which has led to wider spreads, the fund manager increased exposure to corporate bonds. He continues to take a cautious approach, preferring more defensive sectors, such as utilities. The fund manager also selectively increased the fund's weighting in secured financial bonds due to his belief that their spreads have now widened sufficiently to compensate for the higher risk associated with these assets. Conversely, the portfolio's exposure to supranational bonds was reduced as their yields have fallen to extremely low levels. The fund manager believes that more attractive investment opportunities lie elsewhere.

What type of funds are in this risk category?

Some of these funds invest in fixed interest securities, predominantly corporate bonds, with higher yielding corporate bonds placed towards the top end of this range as they carry higher default risk. The other funds in this category invest in a wide range of assets which help to provide risk diversification.

What is the risk rating?

- › These risk ratings have been developed by Prudential to help provide an indication of a fund's potential level of risk and reward based on the type of assets which may be held by the fund. Other companies may use different descriptions and as such these risk ratings should not be considered as generic across the fund management industry.
- › We regularly review our fund risk ratings, so they may change in the future. If, in our view, there is a material change in the fund's level of risk, for example due to a significant change to the assets held by the fund or in the way the fund is managed, we will provide information on the new risk rating. We recommend that you make sure you understand the risk rating of any fund before you invest. You will find this information at www.pru.co.uk/factsheets
- › You should also consider discussing your decision and the appropriateness of a fund's risk rating with an adviser.
