

Prudential Diversified Growth fund (series 3)

Fund description

The fund invests in an unconstrained and diversified mix of assets predominantly equities and alternative assets, but it can also invest in property, bonds and cash in market conditions where these may help the fund achieve its target. Active asset allocation decisions are driven by the attractiveness of current market valuations compared to expected long-run returns for each asset class. The fund's target is to give a real return of 6.75% gross above the rate of inflation over a rolling 5 year period (although this level of return cannot be guaranteed).

Commentary

The stockmarket rebound that drove returns in the previous review period filtered somewhat in the fourth quarter of 2009 as investors realised some of their recent gains. Holdings in emerging market equities and UK commercial property provided very healthy returns for the fund. Indeed, the fund manager's decision to initiate a holding in UK commercial property in the previous quarter coincided with a strong rebound in the asset class. However, a relatively small presence in basic materials producers weighed on the fund's position in European equities during a period when commodities stocks were in high demand amongst investors.

Given the scale of the equity market rebound in 2009 and continued problems in the credit markets, the fund manager is doubtful about the potential for further substantial gains in the coming months. With this in mind, he adjusted the portfolio to reduce its exposure to risk. He took some profits from the equity holdings in North America, Japan, the Pacific Basin and the emerging markets, while also closing the position in higher yielding corporate bonds. Some of the fund's available cash was invested in 10-year UK government bond futures. The fund manager believes that current yields of around 4.0% are a reasonable return considering his expectations for low inflation over the medium term, although there may be some short-term volatility.
