

Prudential Balanced Portfolio

A sub-fund of Prudential Investment Funds (1)

Annual short report for the year ended 31 October 2011

Authorised Corporate Director's report

Investment objective of the Prudential Balanced Portfolio

The Fund aims to achieve long-term total return (the combination of income and growth of capital) by investing mainly in collective investment schemes. Between 40% and 80% of the Fund will be invested in schemes whose predominant exposure is to equities.

Policy for achieving the objective of the Prudential Balanced Portfolio

The Fund is an actively managed portfolio investing mainly in collective investment schemes in order to provide a well diversified exposure to global equities, fixed income and variable rate assets, immovable property, cash and / or near cash. Typically the Fund will have a bias towards assets providing potential for growth, such as equities. Scheme selection is made on the basis of in depth initial and ongoing qualitative assessment of the fund managers and quantitative analysis of the collective investment schemes.

The Fund may also invest directly in other assets including transferable securities, other collective investment schemes, cash and near cash, deposits, warrants and money market instruments. Derivative instruments may be directly held for the purposes of efficient portfolio management only.

Risk profile

All stockmarket investments carry risk, the value of your investment and any income from it may fall as well as rise and you may not get back your original investment. Past performance is not a guide to future performance. The level of income is not fixed and may vary. A rising rate of inflation will have the effect of reducing the actual value of any gain by an equivalent amount. The current tax regime applicable to investors in this Collective Investment Scheme is not guaranteed and may change in the future.

Collective Investment Schemes invest in a range of assets, each with its individual risks. While the fund manager will exercise due skill and care in selecting such schemes for investment, he will not have any control over the management of these schemes or the fair pricing of their underlying securities. As such, there is no guarantee that fair value is at all times reflected in the reported net asset value.

The fund can hold fixed interest investments, the value of the fixed interest securities held in the fund will fall in the event of a default or perceived increased credit risk of an issuer. Yields of the fixed interest securities held may vary and the level of income may fluctuate. High-yielding bonds are generally issued by companies with lower credit ratings. They are more likely to default on their payments than traditional corporate bonds but offer a higher yield in return.

The fund can hold investments in property funds. The following risk factors are applicable to the property asset class. It is anticipated that rental growth will take place for any property investments. Rent default could have an adverse impact on the performance of rental growth. The value of any property holding is generally determined by the opinion of a standing independent valuer and is therefore subjective. Property investments can be relatively illiquid compared to bonds and equities. Liquidity is a measure of how easily an investment can be traded.

Investment activities over the report period

During the 12 months under review, the Prudential Balanced Portfolio produced a total return (capital performance with net income reinvested) of 2.0%. This was ahead of the average total return of 0.3% in the fund's peer group, the IMA Balanced Managed sector.

While the fund's equity and fixed interest holdings delivered positive returns overall, the review period offered a mixed bag of investor sentiment, volatility and risk aversion. The period began with the US Federal Reserve's plan to inject $600 billion into the country's financial system to encourage growth, which contributed to the Dow Jones Index hitting two-year highs. The end of the 12-month period also saw European markets rallying strongly on expectations that policy initiatives would begin to provide some certainty to the continent's on-going sovereign debt crisis.

The period in-between was not so clear-cut. As we moved through 2011, civil unrest across the Middle East and North Africa fuelled concerns about potential oil supply problems, and the devastating earthquake and tsunami which struck Japan on 11 March threw stockmarkets into chaos.

Going into the summer, global markets experienced a prolonged bout of risk aversion and extreme volatility, which intensified noticeably in August and again in September. Equities were sold indiscriminately across the world as investors worried about the ability of policymakers to solve the eurozone's debt problems. A reduction in global growth expectations in response to fiscal tightening in developed countries also dampened investor sentiment and appetite for riskier assets.

Given these conditions, the fund manager felt that risk assets, particularly equities, appeared attractively priced, but not inexpensive enough to justify the inherent risks in volatile markets. He reduced the portfolio's target allocation to equities from 70% to 65% of the portfolio at the beginning of 2011, cutting back his targeted allocation to the US in particular.

Despite fluctuating markets, the portfolio's exposure to global equities, predominantly in the US and Japan, helped to boost performance. In particular, the Threadneedle American Fund, the Schroder US Mid Cap Fund as well as the Schroder Tokyo Fund and GLG Japan Core Alpha Fund, all added value to the portfolio. Following the tragic events in Japan in March, the fund manager significantly increased the portfolio's weighting in the GLG Japan Core Alpha Fund, believing that many good companies in the country had become undervalued. With this in mind, he likewise considerably increased his position in the Schroder Tokyo Fund.

The portfolio also has exposure to the wider Asian market, and while the First State Asia Pacific Leaders Fund added value, the Fidelity South East Asia Fund delivered disappointing results. Likewise, exposure to European equities through the Henderson European Selected Opportunities Fund, the Henderson European Growth Fund and the Jupiter European Special Situations Fund underperformed given the difficult market conditions on the continent.

The fund manager maintained his 10% target allocation to property. This was split between the M&G Property Portfolio and the Aviva Property Trust, both of which produced positive, though muted, returns over the period while providing an additional element of diversification.

In terms of fixed interest, the fund manager adjusted allocations broadly in line with equity holdings, increasing his target holdings from 18% to 24% of the overall portfolio through the middle of the review period, and settling back to 24% by the end. He remained very negative on government bonds throughout the review period, believing the asset class to be highly overvalued, and where possible he avoided holding them within the portfolio.

The fund manager was cautiously positive on corporate bonds, which he believed were offering much better value than their government counterparts, with credit spreads (the difference between the yield on a corporate bond and a government bond of a similar maturity) appearing attractive. Exposure to the M&G Strategic Corporate Bond Fund, the Fidelity Moneybuilder Income Fund, and the Kames (formerly Aegon) Investment Grade Bond Fund all added value to the portfolio.

In the high yield bond sector, the fund manager maintained his targeted allocation of 5% throughout the review period, distributed evenly across the Kames High Yield Bond Fund and the Baillie Gifford High Yield Bond Fund. Overall he topped up positions across his bond allocation, although exposure to the Old Mutual Corporate Bond Fund was eliminated following a change in the fund's asset manager. He also reallocated 4% of the portfolio into the M&G High Interest Fund, holding a total targeted cash position of 5% at the end of the reporting period.

The fund manager believes that, particularly concerning Europe, market risks still very much exist. Political will and strong policy decisions, including additional fiscal consolidation across the EU, will be necessary to help shore up the system, and it is unlikely to be a smooth road in the near-term. As such, the fund manager believes that holding a balanced range of assets, including fixed income, cash, equities and property, is the best way to provide a healthy risk-adjusted return for the fund's investors, without over-exposure to any single part of the market.
